Putting an advertisement on vaaram.ca —
and looking after it afterwards.

Everything the desk does, in order: what the website sells, where each space lands on the page, how to book one in five steps, how to see it in position before anybody else does, and how to pause, reorder, renew or remove it later.

The whole job, start to finish. Nothing else is required — no developer, no deployment, no waiting.

SECTION 01

Before you start

Vaaram sells two different things, and mixing them up is the one mistake that costs money. This manual is about the second.

	INSIDE THE WEEKLY PDF	ON THE WEBSITE ITSELF
What it is	Space on a page of the printed edition — a classified line, a quarter page, a full page.	A banner in one of fourteen fixed spaces on vaaram.ca.
Who lays it out	Vaaram. The advertiser sends words and pictures; we set it and send a proof.	The advertiser supplies finished artwork at one of three exact sizes.
How long it runs	One edition — one week — then it stays in the archive forever.	As long as you set. A week, three months, or until you stop it.
Where it is managed	Admin → Publish, as part of the edition's PDF.	Admin → Website ads. This manual.

They are sold separately, and they can be sold together

An advertiser can buy a half page inside this week's edition and a side-rail banner on the website, and most of the ones worth having will take both. Nothing in the admin links them — two separate jobs, two separate screens.

Getting to the desk

Sign in at vaaram.ca/admin and choose Website ads from the row of sections along the top. Everything in this manual happens on that screen and the two it leads to.

- Website ads — the desk. What is running, what is free, where it all lands.
- Book an ad — the five-step form for a new booking.
- Edit — one booking, with the same picture of the website beside it.

Nothing you do here needs a developer

Booking, pausing, reordering, renewing and removing all take effect on the live website within a minute. There is no deployment step and no code change. If you can see it on the desk, you can change it.

SECTION 02

The desk at a glance

One screen, five figures across the top and three views underneath. Between them they answer every question the job asks.

Admin → Website ads. The five figures, the three views, and the beginning of the map underneath.

The five figures

Live on the site	Bookings a reader can see right now.	Nothing. This is the number you are paid for.
Ending within 14 days	Live bookings whose end date is close.	Ring the advertiser. Renew from the Edit screen with one button.
Scheduled	Booked, but the start date has not arrived.	Nothing. They appear by themselves on the day.
Paused	Switched off by hand — not by a date.	Check none of these should be running. A paused ad earns nothing.
Free frames to sell	Empty space across the whole website.	This is the sales list. Every free frame is showing Vaaram's own panel instead of a paying advertisement.

If you read one number, read the last one

"Free frames to sell" is the only figure on the desk that is about money you are not yet making. Four empty slots means four places where a reader is being shown "this space could be your advertisement" instead of a client's.

The three views

The tabs under the figures are three ways of looking at the same bookings. Each one exists to answer a different question, and nothing is duplicated between them.

VIEW	THE QUESTION IT ANSWERS	USE IT WHEN
Where ads appear	What have we sold, and what is still free?	Somebody rings up wanting to advertise, and you need to know what you can offer them.
All bookings	Where is this particular advertiser?	You need to find, change, reorder, pause or remove one booking out of thirty.
Schedule	What runs out, and when?	Monday morning. It is the renewals list.

The four states a booking can be in

Every booking carries one of these four words, in the same colour, everywhere it appears on the desk.

LIVE	On the website right now. A reader can see it.
SCHEDULED	Booked and paid for, but its start date has not arrived. It appears by itself on the day.
PAUSED	Switched off by hand. Nothing to do with dates — it stays in the list, keeps its figures, and goes back up the moment you press Show.
FINISHED	Its end date has passed. Give it a new one to run it again, or delete it.

Paused is not the same as finished, and neither is the same as deleted

Paused you did on purpose and can undo in one click. Finished happened on its own, because a date passed.

Deleted cannot be undone: the row, the artwork and the view and click counts all go. When in doubt, pause.

SECTION 03

The three artwork shapes

The whole website sells exactly three proportions. An advertiser supplies one file per shape, and the same file is used on phones, tablets and desktops — only the space around it changes.

The proportion never changes between devices — and that is the point

Every space holds its shape at every screen size; only its width changes. That is why an advertiser sends one image rather than three. The desk tells you which shape a space takes before you upload anything, and the upload zone prints the exact pixel size beside it.

What happens to a file after you choose it

You do not need to resize anything by hand. The moment a file is chosen, and before it is uploaded anywhere, the admin redraws it to the exact pixel size of the space and re-encodes it. A 2 MB export usually lands under 100 KB.

- It is fitted, never cropped. The whole artwork is kept and any spare room is filled with white. An advertiser paid for that image, and losing a phone number off the edge of it is a worse outcome than a white margin.
- It is re-encoded to WebP. Advertisement files are served straight to readers without going through an optimiser, so every byte uploaded is a byte every visitor downloads.
- Accepted: JPG, PNG and WebP, under 2 MB. Nothing else — a PDF or an Illustrator file cannot be shown on a web page.

Booking one advertiser into two different shapes

If the same advertiser is going into, say, the side rail (a card) and the home leaderboard (a wide strip), the booking form asks for one image per shape — not one photo stretched into both. A picture composed for a 2:1 card leaves an 11:2 strip almost entirely empty either side, which looks like a fault rather than an advertisement.

SECTION 04

Every space the website sells

Fourteen spaces, in the order a reader meets them. “Frames” is how many advertisements are on screen at once — book more than that and they take turns.

THE SPACE	PAGE	SHAPE	FRAMES	TIER
Home — leaderboard, above everything	Home	Wide strip	1	Premium
Home — tower, left of the headline	Home	Tall tower	2	Premium
Home — cards, right of the headline	Home	Card	4	Premium
Home — under the hero	Home	Wide strip	1	Strong
Home — mid page	Home	Wide strip	1	Strong
Home — feature block	Home	Wide strip	1	Strong
Home — above the closing call	Home	Wide strip	1	Standard
Archive — above the editions	Archive	Wide strip	1	Standard
Archive — between editions	Archive	Wide strip	1	Standard
Reader — above the pages	Edition reader	Wide strip	1	Premium
Side rail — beside the reader	Edition reader	Card	Unlimited	Premium
Reader — under the pages	Edition reader	Wide strip	1	Standard
Side rail — every page	Every page	Card	Unlimited	Strong

“Unlimited” means the page simply grows

The two side rails and the footer grid hold any number of advertisements — every booking is on the page at once, one under another, in the order you set. The other eleven spaces have a fixed number of frames, and anything booked beyond that takes turns in them.

What a reader actually sees, space by space

THE SPACE	WHAT A READER IS LOOKING AT WHEN THEY MEET IT
Home — leaderboard, above everything	A wide strip across the very top of the home page, above the headline and above the week's cover. The first advertisement anyone sees.
Home — tower, left of the headline	Two tall upright towers running down the left of the opening screen, beside the headline.
Home — cards, right of the headline	Four cards stacked down the right of the opening screen, beside the week's cover.
Home — under the hero	A wide strip directly under the opening screen — the first slot a reader meets after scrolling.
Home — mid page	Halfway down the home page, just after the section explaining what Vaaram is. The same booking also runs on the About page.
Home — feature block	In the feature block between the two halves of the home page. The most room a single advertiser gets on the site.
Archive — above the editions	Above the archive browser, before the first cover.
Archive — between editions	Dealt into the archive's cover grid, after the eighth edition.
Reader — above the pages	Directly above the pages of an edition — the last thing a reader passes before they start reading.
Side rail — beside the reader	A standing column of cards beside the pages of an edition — on screen for as long as somebody is reading.
Reader — under the pages	Directly under the edition, seen by someone who has just finished reading it.
Side rail — every page	The main rail — a standing column of cards down the left of the home page and the archive. It also tops up the reader's own rail when that one is short.
Every page — above the footer	A wrapping grid of cards above the footer on every single page — home, archive, about, contact and every edition.

On a phone, the side rails are threaded through the page

There is no room for a standing column on a phone, so the same cards are dealt into the page a couple at a time as the reader scrolls. Every booking still appears, in the same order, at full width — and because a view is only counted once a card has been on screen for a full second, threading them through means more of them are genuinely seen, not fewer.

The first view on the desk draws each page of the website small, with the advertisement spaces as real blocks among the headline, the cover and the text. Every block is a button.

Using the map to sell

- Start from the empty blocks. Every dashed "FREE" block is a space currently showing Vaaram's own panel instead of a paying advertiser.
- Match the shape to what they already have. A business with a landscape logo belongs in a card or a strip, not a tower — the map tells you which spaces take which.
- Quote the position, not the name. "The wide strip directly above this week's edition" sells; "home_hero" does not. Every row on the map is written in the first form for exactly that reason.

SECTION 06

Booking an ad

Five steps down one page, with a picture of the website beside them that updates as you fill the form in. Nothing is hidden behind a “next” button: check it top to bottom, once, the way you would check a paper order form.

Start it either from Book an ad at the top of the desk, or from Book this slot inside a space you have just opened on the map — which arrives with that space already chosen for you.

01 Choose where it appears

The spaces are grouped by page and each card tells you three things: where it is, what shape the artwork must be, and how full it is right now. A space with room says so in wine. Tick Put it in several places to book one advertiser into more than one space at once.

02 Add the artwork

One image, at the size printed beside the upload zone. Drop the file on the zone or press Choose image. It is resized and re-encoded for you. If the spaces you ticked in step 1 use more than one shape, this step asks for one image per shape and says why.

03 Say who it is for

The advertiser's name is only ever shown to you — it is how you will find this booking again in six weeks. The link is optional: leave it blank and the advertisement still shows, it just is not clickable. Clicks are counted either way.

04 Set when it runs

One month, three, six, or no end date — the four buttons set both dates for you. An end date is what puts the booking on the schedule and what triggers the fourteen-day warning, so set one whenever the advertiser has paid for a fixed run. It runs to the end of the day you choose.

05 Put it on the website

Leave “Show it on the website straight away” ticked and it is live within a minute. Untick it to save the booking paused — useful when the artwork is approved but the invoice is not paid yet.

VAARAM — NAVIGATION

Steps 2 and 3, with the artwork chosen. The moment a file is picked it appears in the preview on the right, in position on the real page.

The screenshot shows the 'Website ads' form in the Vaaram Magazine Admin interface. The top navigation bar includes the Vaaram logo, 'ADMIN', and a 'Sign out' button. The main navigation menu has links for Dashboard, Issues, Publish, Enquiries, Website ads, Readers, and Settings. The form is titled 'Sunrise Motors' and includes a field for 'WHERE A CLICK SHOULD TAKE THE READER (optional)' with the value 'https://sunrisemotors.example.com'. Below this is a section '4 When does it run?' with instructions and buttons for 'One month', 'Three months', 'Six months', and 'No end date'. It also has fields for 'START SHOWING ON' and 'STOP SHOWING AFTER' with date pickers. A 'Finer control' button is at the bottom of this section. The next section is '5 Put it on the website' with a checkbox 'Show it on the website straight away' and a 'Book this ad' button. On the right, there is a preview of the ad layout with sections like 'HOW IT WORKS', 'ADVERTISE WITH VAARAM', 'PREVIOUS EDITIONS', 'FREE', 'GET YOUR BUSINESS DISCOVERED', and 'ABOVE THE FOOTER - ON EVERY PAGE'. A legend at the bottom right explains the status icons: 'Booked and running' (pink), 'Ending soon' (yellow), and 'Free - available to sell' (blue).

Step 4. The four run-length buttons fill both dates. “Finer control” holds the running order, the edition filter and the seconds-on-screen setting — all optional, and all changeable afterwards.

Nothing here is permanent

Every field on this form — including the artwork and the space itself — can be changed afterwards from the Edit screen. Book it, look at it on the live site, adjust if it needs it.

SECTION 07

Seeing it in position first

The panel beside the booking form, and the Preview button on every row, both draw the same thing: the actual page of the website, with this advertisement in its actual place, surrounded by whatever else is really booked.

What the preview shows

The whole page, drawn small, with every advertisement currently booked into it rendered in its own frame — and the one you are working on ringed in wine so you cannot lose it.

This is not a guess or a mock-up. The spaces, their proportions and their order are the same ones the website itself uses, and the artwork shown in the other frames is the artwork really running there.

Desktop and Phone

The toggle at the top switches between the two arrangements. They are genuinely different: on a phone the side rails are threaded through the page and the hero's towers and cards leave the sides to gather under the headline. An advertiser being sold "the left rail" is mostly buying that behaviour, so it is worth looking at both before you quote.

Open the real page

The link under the preview opens the live page in a new tab, so you can check the finished thing the way a reader will see it.

Why a drawing rather than the real page in a little window

A shrunk copy of the live site would be honest and useless — nothing in it could be read, it would cost a full page load every time, and it could not show an empty space at all, which is the thing you most need to see.

The same preview reached from a booking that is already live: press Preview on any row. The artwork itself is printed beside the page, along with where a click sends the reader.

Check both before you quote

Two thirds of Vaaram's readers are on a phone. An advertisement that reads beautifully on a desktop rail and turns into an unreadable sliver on a phone is a complaint waiting to happen — and the preview will have shown you, before you took the money.

SECTION 08

Managing what is running

The All bookings view is the working list: every booking, grouped by the space it sits in, in the order a reader meets them.

What each control does

CONTROL	WHAT IT DOES	CAN IT BE UNDONE?
↑ ↓ arrows	Moves the booking one place up or down inside its own space. The number on the left is its position in the running order a reader sees.	Yes — press the other arrow.
Preview	Draws the page with this advertisement in position. Changes nothing.	Nothing to undo.
Edit	Opens the full booking: artwork, space, dates, link, order, everything.	Yes — nothing saves until you press Save changes.
Hide / Show	Takes the advertisement off the website, or puts it back. The booking stays in the list and keeps its figures.	Yes, instantly.
Delete	Removes the booking, throws the artwork away and loses its view and click counts. Asks once first.	No.

Hide, not Delete, when an advertiser is between runs

Hiding keeps the row, the artwork and the figures — so when they come back you press Show and set new dates, with nothing to re-upload and the history intact. Delete is for bookings that will never return.

Changing the running order

Where several advertisements share a space, the number beside each one is its position. Use the arrows for a single step. To move something a long way — from twelfth to second in a long rail — open Edit and type a number in Position in the running order instead: positions step in tens, so typing 15 drops a booking between the ones at 10 and 20 without renumbering anything.

SECTION 09

Dates, expiry and renewals

A booking with an end date looks after itself: it goes up on its start date, comes down at the end of its last day, and warns you a fortnight before it does.

The screenshot shows the 'Website ads' section of the Vaaram Magazine Admin interface. At the top, there's a navigation bar with links to Dashboard, Issues, Publish, Enquiries, Website ads (active), Readers, and Settings. A 'Sign out' button is also present. Below the navigation bar, the 'Website ads' section is titled, followed by a description: 'Every advertisement space sold on the website itself — what is running, what is free, and where each one lands on the page. Separate from the advertisements printed inside the weekly PDF.' A '+ Book an ad' button is visible. Below this, there are five summary cards: 'LIVE ON THE SITE' (30), 'ENDING WITHIN 14 DAYS' (0), 'SCHEDULED' (0), 'PAUSED' (3), and 'FREE FRAMES TO SELL' (4+). Below these cards, there are tabs for 'Where ads appear', 'All bookings' (33), and 'Schedule' (active). The 'Schedule' view shows a table of active bookings with columns for Advertiser, dates (AUG 31 → DEC 13), and Runs Out. The table lists five advertisers: Anbu Driving School, Kandan Electronics, Anjali Daycare, Apex Mortgages, and Bala & Associates CPA, each with a visual bar representing the duration of the booking.

ADVERTISER	AUG 31 → DEC 13	RUNS OUT
Anjali Daycare Home — cards, right of the headline	[Progress bar]	No end date
Apex Mortgages Side rail — every page	[Progress bar]	No end date

The Schedule view. Everything running or about to, soonest to finish first. The vertical line is today; a bar that fades out to the right has no end date.

How the two dates behave

- Start showing on — blank means straight away. Set it and the booking sits as Scheduled until that morning, then appears by itself.
- Stop showing after — the advertisement runs to the end of the day you choose, not the beginning of it. Blank means it never stops.
- Fourteen days out, a live booking with an end date starts counting down on the desk, turns amber on the map, and is listed in the warning strip at the top.

Renewing

Open the booking and use +1 month, +3 months or +6 months beside the dates. They extend from whichever is later — today or the current end date — so renewing early never shortens a run the advertiser has already paid for.

Remove end date turns it into an open-ended booking.

WHERE A READER MEETS IT

A wrapping grid of cards above the footer on every single page of the website — home, archive, about, contact and every edition.

ON A PHONE

Two cards across instead of four. Every booking still appears.

The Edit screen. The same picture of the website as the booking form, and it follows every change — swap the artwork or move it to another space and you see the result before you save.

Moving a booking to a differently-shaped space

If you change the space to one with a different proportion, the desk will not let you save until you upload artwork drawn for the new shape. The old file would either be cropped or sit in a band of empty background — neither is what the advertiser paid for.

SECTION 10

What is free to sell

Click any space on the map — booked or empty — and it opens with the whole page drawn around it.

An empty space. The website is showing Vaaram's own panel here until something is booked. "Book this slot" starts the form with this space already chosen.

How occupancy is described

WHAT IT SAYS	WHAT IT MEANS
Empty — 1 frame free	Nothing booked. Available to sell immediately.
2 of 4 frames taken · 2 free	Room for more without anything having to take turns.
Full — 1 of 1 frame taken	Sold. Anything further booked here would share the frame.
6 sharing 4 frames	Over-subscribed on purpose: six bookings taking turns in four frames. Still sellable, but each one is on screen less often.
8 running · room for any number more	A rail or the footer grid. There is no ceiling — the page grows.

An empty space is never an empty box

The website never shows a blank rectangle. Anywhere nothing is booked, it shows Vaaram's own quiet "this space could be your advertisement" panel, which links to the contact page. It keeps the page looking right and it sells the slot to the businesses reading the site.

SECTION 11

Artwork that works

What to ask an advertiser for, and what to send back.

SHAPE	ASK FOR	REFUSE
Card 1200 × 600	A name, one line of what they do, and a way to reach them. It is printed about the size of a business card on a phone.	Paragraphs. Price lists. Anything set smaller than the name.
Wide strip 1650 × 300	A logo and three or four words. On a phone this is roughly 64 pixels tall.	A phone number — it will not be legible on a phone. Put it in the link instead.
Tall tower 600 × 1200	Set it like a shop window: name at the top, one line, a number at the bottom.	A landscape photograph. It will sit in a white band with most of the tower empty.

The rules the admin enforces for you

- JPG, PNG or WebP only, under 2 MB. Anything else is refused with a sentence saying why.
- Every file is redrawn to the exact size of its space and re-encoded before upload.
- Artwork is fitted inside the frame, never cropped — nothing is lost off the edge.
- Every advertisement on the site carries an "Advertisement" label, and every clickable one is marked as a paid link. Both are required of paid placement in Canada and neither is optional.

Seconds on screen

Where advertisements take turns, each one holds its frame for seven seconds unless you say otherwise. Give a busy advertisement carrying an address or a phone number longer — anything from 3 to 60 seconds — and a plain logo less. It is under Finer control on the booking form and on the Edit screen.

SECTION 12

When something looks wrong

The short list of things that actually happen, and what each one means.

WHAT YOU SEE	WHAT IT MEANS	WHAT TO DO
The ad is not on the website	It is Paused, Scheduled, or Finished — the desk will say which.	Find it in All bookings and read its state chip. Press Show, or fix the dates.
"This space could be your advertisement"	Nothing live is booked in that space. This is Vaaram's own panel, not a fault.	Book it, or check whether the booking you expected is paused or finished.
A white band beside the artwork	The supplied file was not the shape of the space, so it was fitted rather than cropped.	Ask the advertiser for artwork at the exact size printed on the upload zone.
"Artwork must be under 2 MB"	The file is too heavy to serve to every reader.	Ask for it exported again at a lower quality, or as a JPG.
The ad shows but clicks go nowhere	No link was set, or the one set was not a valid web address.	Open Edit and put a full address in, starting with https://
The order on the site is not what you set	Paused and finished bookings keep their position in the list but are not on the page.	Filter to Live and check the order of those.
Views are not going up	A view is only counted once a card has been at least half on screen for a full second. Readers who scroll straight past are not counted.	Nothing. This is deliberate — it is what makes the figures defensible when a client asks.

One habit worth keeping

Before you quote a price, open the space on the map and look at the preview on a phone. Half of what an advertiser is buying is how their artwork behaves on the screen most readers actually use.
