

Advertising on the Vaaram website.

The website sells advertising space of its own, separate from the space inside the weekly PDF. This guide covers that product only: the fourteen places an advertisement can appear, the three artwork sizes, and exactly how one is posted from the admin dashboard and what happens on the website when it is. One advertiser is booked from start to finish, photographed at every step.

WHAT IS ON THE LIVE WEBSITE RIGHT NOW

Thirty-one demonstration advertisements have been booked onto `vaaram-magazine.vercel.app` so that the site can be seen doing this job rather than described doing it.

They fill ten of the fourteen sellable placements. The remaining four are deliberately left empty so you can see, in the same visit, exactly what an unsold slot looks like: it shows Vaaram's own "This space could be your advertisement" panel rather than a blank box.

Every one of them is an invented business. Part 5 explains how to clear them all in a single step before the first real advertiser goes on.

THIS GUIDE REPLACES SECTIONS 3.8 AND 3.9 OF THE PRODUCT DOCUMENTATION

The banner system has been rebuilt since Product & Administrator Documentation v1.0 was written. Three things in that document are now out of date, and this guide is the correct one on all three:

1. There are now fourteen sellable placements, not ten — the two side rails and the three home-page opening slots are new, and the old Reader — beside the pages slot has been retired.
2. A banner now takes one image, not three. The old form asked for separate desktop, tablet and phone artwork at six different sizes.
3. There are three artwork sizes in total — 1200×600 , 1650×300 and 600×1200 — and the website resizes what you upload to fit.
4. Any slot whose advertisements share a frame now lets you set how many seconds each one holds it, a banner at a time.

PART 1

What the website sells

Two products share the word “advertisement” and are bought, priced and delivered quite differently. Getting the distinction straight is most of the job.

	IN THE WEEKLY PDF	ON THE WEBSITE
What it is	A printed advertisement on a page of the edition — full page down to a few classified lines.	A picture on the website itself, in one of fourteen fixed places, which can be clicked.
Who makes it	You lay it out and send the advertiser a proof.	The advertiser supplies one image, or you make one for them.
Where it is managed	Nowhere on the website. It is simply part of the PDF you upload.	Admin → Banners. The whole of this guide.
How long it runs	One edition — then it stays in the archive forever.	Until you hide it, or until its stop date. You choose.
What can be measured	Edition views and downloads, for the whole edition.	Views, clicks and click rate, per advertiser. The numbers you can quote back.

THE ONE SENTENCE TO GIVE AN ADVERTISER

“Space in the magazine puts you in front of everyone who reads this week’s edition. A banner on the website puts you in front of everyone who visits the site at all — this week, next week, and every week after that, until you stop it. Most businesses take both.”

1.1 The three artwork shapes — and only three

Whatever slot is booked, the artwork is one of exactly three shapes. This is the single most useful thing to know when talking to an advertiser, because it is the whole of what you need to ask them for.

Card — 2:1

1200 × 600 px

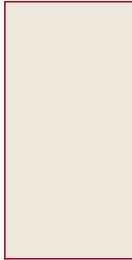

Every side-rail advertisement, the four cards beside the home-page headline, and every footer advertisement.

Wide strip — 11:2

1650 × 300 px

The wide billboard slots across the page. On a phone this is only about 64 px tall, so a logo and four words — never a phone number.

Tower — 1:2

The tall upright frames down the left of the home page opening screen. Narrow: a name, one line, a number, set large.

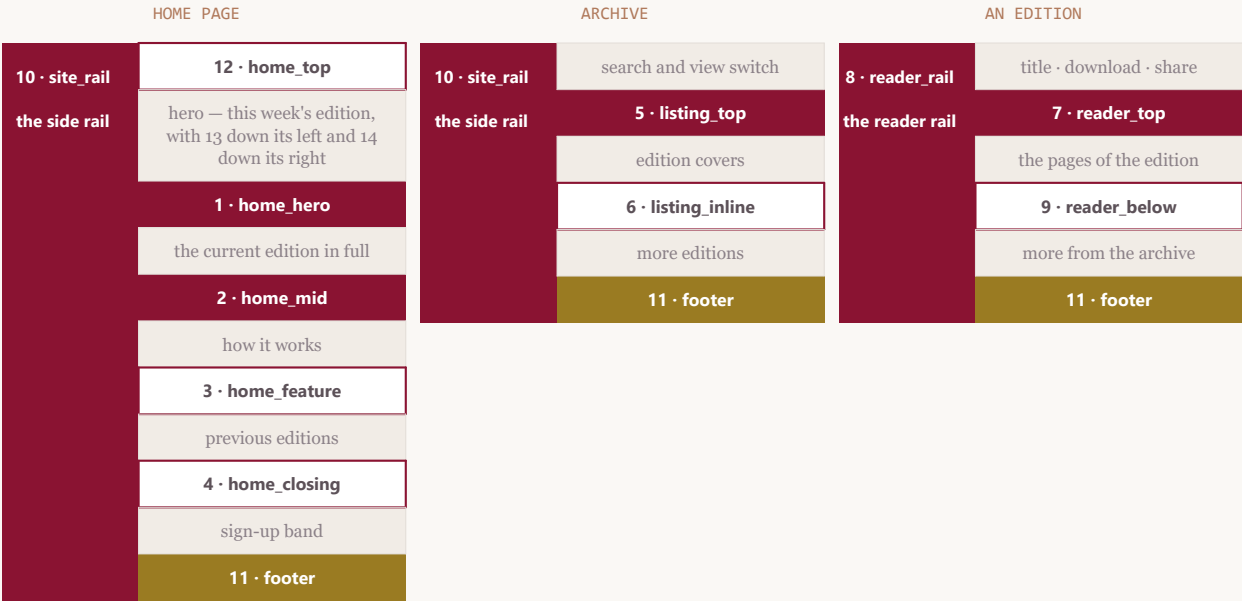

ONE IMAGE IS ENOUGH — THE WEBSITE DOES THE REST

You upload one picture per advertisement. Before it is saved, the website redraws it to the exact size of the slot and re-encodes it, so a 2 MB export from a design tool usually lands near 60 KB on the site. The same picture is then used on phones, tablets and desktops — the shape never changes, only the width of the column around it.

The artwork is fitted inside the frame rather than cropped to fill it. If an advertiser sends a square logo it will show with a white margin at each side, and nothing will be cut off — losing a phone number off the edge of a paid advertisement is the worse failure of the two.

1.2 The fourteen placements, and where each one sits

Every sellable position on the website is below. The map shows them in place on the three pages that carry them; the table underneath gives the exact name each one has in the Where it appears dropdown.

booked in the demonstration the footer grid, on every page left open — showing the “book this slot” panel

#	AS IT APPEARS IN THE DROPDOWN	SHAPE	HOLDS	WHERE IT LANDS

3	Home — feature block	Strip	Sharing 1 frame	The full-width panel halfway down the home page.
6	Archive — between editions	Strip	Sharing 1 frame	Inside the cover grid, after the eighth edition.
7	Reader — above the pages	Strip	Sharing 1 frame	Directly above the magazine pages. Seen by everyone who actually reads.
8	Side rail — beside the reader	Card	Any number	The column beside the pages of an edition, where readers stay longest. Tops itself up from the every-page rail when it is short.
10	Side rail — every page	Card	Any number	The main rail. The long column of advertisements down the side of the home page and the archive. This is the side deck.

#	AS IT APPEARS IN THE DROPDOWN	SHAPE	HOLDS	WHERE IT LANDS
12	Home — leaderboard, above everything	Strip	Sharing 1 frame	Across the very top of the home page, above the headline. The first thing anyone sees on the site.
13	Home — tower, left of the headline	Tower	Sharing 2 frames	Two tall upright frames down the left of the opening screen, beside the headline and this week's cover.
14	Home — cards, right of the headline	Card	Sharing 4 frames	Four cards down the right of the opening screen — four advertisers on screen at once, before a reader has scrolled at all.

“SHARING A FRAME” VERSUS “ANY NUMBER” — THE MOST IMPORTANT LINE IN THE TABLE

Sharing a frame. Book two advertisers into the same strip and they take turns in it, with small dots showing how many are sharing. Both are counted properly, but only one is on screen at a time, so a single frame should not be sold to more than three or four advertisers at once. How long each one holds the frame is yours to set, per banner, in Seconds on screen; left blank it is seven seconds. The running order decides who is showing when the page opens.

Several frames sharing one running order. The three home-page opening slots work the same way but with more than one frame — two towers, four cards — and the bookings are dealt across them in turn. With four frames, the first four advertisements in your order are the four on screen when a reader arrives, and the rest cycle in behind them. So a slot with four frames comfortably carries eight or twelve bookings.

Any number. The two side rails and the footer grid show every advertisement booked into them, one under another, in the order you set. There is no limit and no rotation. This is why the side rail is the placement to sell hardest — it is the only one where signing a tenth advertiser does not take screen time away from the other nine.

The side rail — the side deck, in full

The long column of advertisements beside the content. It is the placement most often asked about, it behaves unlike any other slot on the site, and it is worth understanding properly before it is sold.

The screenshot shows the Vaaram Magazine live home page. On the left, there is a vertical 'side rail' containing five advertisements. From top to bottom, they are: Sri Balaji Motors (car repair), Selvi Jewellers (bridal sets), Ilango Law (immigration), Thinusha Catering (weddings), and Apex Mortgages (mortgage). To the right of the rail is the magazine's own content, including a 'THIS WEEK'S EDITION' section with the title 'Testing Advertisement', a 'Published' date of September 10, 2026, and a 'Length' of 14 pages. Below this is a 'Read now' button and a 'View archives' link. Further down is a 'WHAT VAARAM IS' section with the headline 'Your weekly destination for discovering local businesses, services and...' and a list of categories: Businesses, Services, and Property.

What makes it different from every other slot

BEHAVIOUR	WHAT IT MEANS FOR YOU
It has no limit	Book one advertiser or thirty. Every one of them shows. Nothing rotates, nothing is hidden behind a “next” arrow, and no advertiser loses screen time because you signed another.
You set the order	Each booking has a position. The advertiser at the top of the rail is seen first and by the most people, which makes the top of the rail the premium position — and something you can legitimately charge more for.
It appears on two pages	Side rail — every page runs down both the home page and the archive. One booking, both pages.
It has a second rail beside the reader	Side rail — beside the reader runs beside the pages of an edition, which is where readers spend by far the longest. If that rail is short, it tops itself up from the every-page rail automatically, so it is never left looking half-sold.
It never ends on dead air	Below the last paid advertisement the rail closes with Vaaram's own “book this slot” panel. The bottom of the rail is always selling the rail.
On a phone it is threaded, not stacked	See below. This is the part worth understanding before an advertiser asks.

1.4 What the side rail does on a phone

A phone has no room for two columns. Stacking the whole rail above the content would put thousands of pixels of advertising in front of a reader before they reached a single word, and most of them would leave. So on a phone the same advertisements are dealt into the content instead, a couple at a time, in the same order, each at full width.

THIS IS BETTER FOR THE ADVERTISER, NOT A COMPROMISE

A view is only counted once an advertisement has genuinely been on screen. Threading the rail through the page means a reader scrolls past every advertisement in it on the way down, so more of them are actually seen — and actually counted — than if they were all stacked at the top where most readers never reach. The desktop rail and the phone arrangement show exactly the same bookings; neither double-counts the other.

1.5 What an unsold slot does

A slot with nothing booked into it never shows a blank box or an empty grey rectangle. It shows Vaaram's own panel instead, labelled as Vaaram's own advertising and linked to your contact page. Four placements are in this state on the live site today, on purpose, so that you can see it.

Size	Description
Half page	Across the width
Quarter page	A strong block
Eighth page	Compact and clear

PART 2

Posting an advertisement

One advertiser — Kandan Electronics — booked into the side rail from start to finish. Every picture in this part was taken while it was actually being done, and the advertisement is on the live website now.

2.1 Signing in

Go to vaaram-magazine.vercel.app/admin — or, once the domain is connected, vaaram.ca/admin. Enter the administrator email and password. If the password is ever unavailable, Sign in with email verification code instead sends a one-time code to the same mailbox.

The five steps, one at a time

Choose where it appears — before anything else

Open the Where it appears dropdown. It is grouped into Side rails, Wide strips and Footer. Pick the slot the advertiser has bought.

The moment you choose, two things change underneath: the size the form asks for, and a line of explanation about that slot. For the side rail it says in wine text that the slot shows every banner booked into it, so you can add as many as you like. In this example the advertiser bought the every-page side rail.

It is saved

The form empties itself and returns to its starting state — that is how it tells you it worked. The new booking appears in the list on the right straight away, in its placement group, at the position you gave it, with 0 views · 0 clicks · 0.0% click rate and its stop date printed underneath.

If anything had gone wrong you would instead see a red message above the button, and everything you typed would still be there to correct.

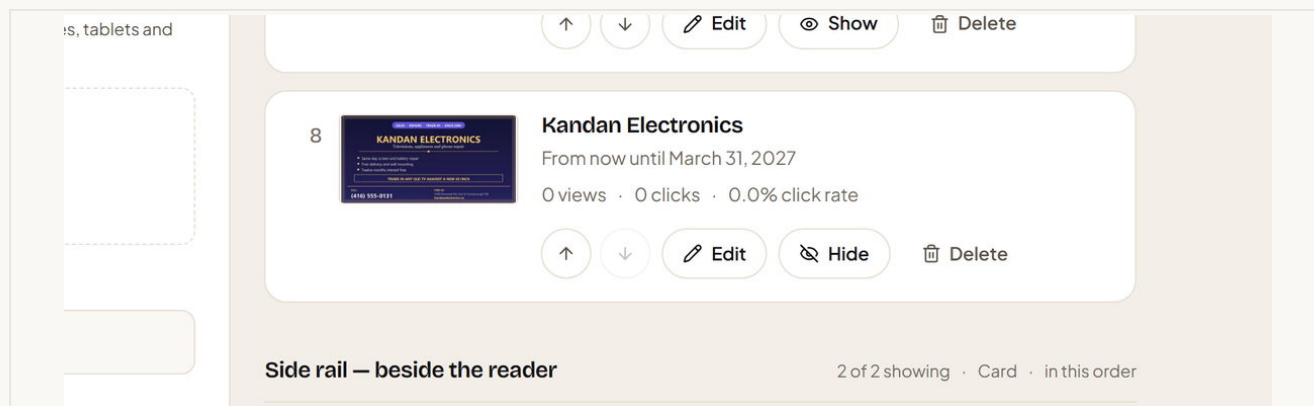

FIGURE 2.8 — Step 5. Kandan Electronics saved as number 8 in the side rail: its artwork, “From now until March 31, 2027”, its three counters, and the five controls — move up, move down, Edit, Hide and Delete.

2.4 And on the website

That is the whole job. The advertisement is on the public site within about a minute — no publishing step, no approval, nothing else to press. The picture below was taken on the live home page immediately afterwards.

PART 3

After it is live

Everything you will need to do to a booking once it exists — and what the three numbers underneath it actually mean when an advertiser asks whether their advertisement is working.

3.1 The five controls under every booking

CONTROL	WHAT IT DOES	CAN IT BE UNDONE?
↑ ↓ Move up / down	Changes the running order on the website, immediately. Only appears on the placements that show every booking — the two side rails and the footer. The top of a rail is the most valuable position in it.	Yes — move it back.
Edit	Opens the booking on its own screen. You can change the advertiser's name, the link, the placement, the dates, the position — and replace the artwork. Leave the artwork alone and the existing picture is kept untouched.	Yes — edit again.
Hide	Takes it off the website at once but keeps everything, counters included. The button then reads Show . This is what to use when an advertiser pauses, or has not paid yet.	Yes — press Show.
Delete	Removes the booking and its counters for good. It asks you to confirm first.	No. Use Hide unless you are certain.

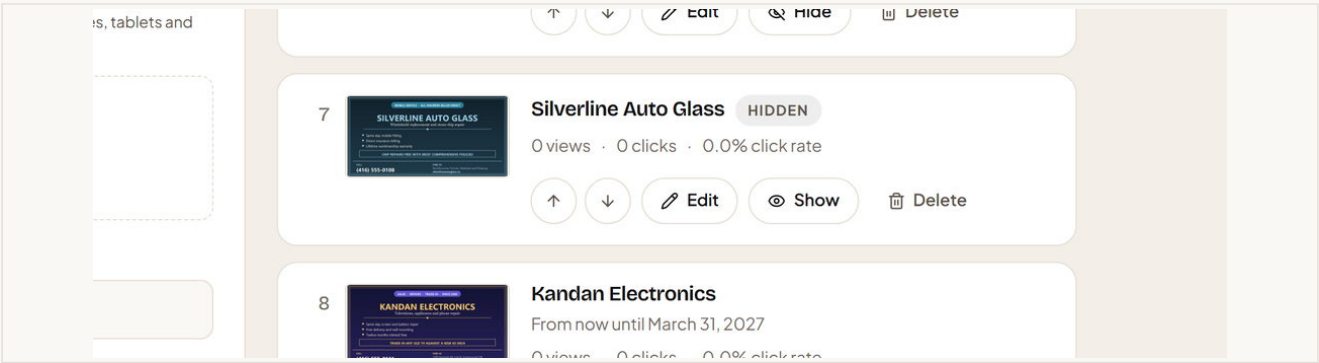

FIGURE 3.1 — A hidden booking. Silverline Auto Glass is saved, keeps its position and its counters, is tagged HIDDEN, and its button now reads Show. It is not on the website.

3.2 Start and stop dates

FIELD	WHAT HAPPENS
Start showing on	The booking is saved now but stays off the website until that morning. Use it to set up a campaign in advance — for a seasonal advertiser, for instance — and then forget about it. Leave it empty and it starts immediately.
Stop showing on	On the morning after this date the advertisement simply stops appearing. It stays in your list, tagged, with its final numbers intact, so you can quote them when you ring the advertiser about renewing. Leave it empty and it runs until you hide it.
Only in one edition?	Almost always leave this on Show in all editions . The alternative ties the advertisement to one edition type, which only matters if Vaaram ever publishes more than the weekly.

3.3 Views, clicks and click rate — what they really count

These are the numbers you will quote to an advertiser, so it matters that they mean exactly what they claim. They are deliberately conservative.

NUMBER	COUNTED WHEN	NOT COUNTED WHEN
Views	The advertisement has actually been on the reader's screen — properly in view, for about a second.	It is further down a page nobody scrolled to; the browser tab is in the background; a rotating strip turned over while off screen.
Clicks	A reader clicks through to the advertiser's link, which opens in a new tab so they do not lose the magazine.	There is no link on the booking.
Click rate	Worked out for you: clicks ÷ views. This is the number to quote when an advertiser asks whether it is working.	—

WHAT IS NOT COLLECTED, AND WHY IT MATTERS

No cookie is set and no IP address is stored. These are plain running totals and nothing else — the site cannot tell you who saw an advertisement, only how many times it was seen. That is an honest number to put in front of an advertiser, and it is also the reason the website needs no cookie banner.

3.4 Two advertisers sharing one strip

When more than one booking sits in the same wide strip, they take turns automatically — about seven seconds each — and small dots appear showing how many are sharing it. Hovering pauses the rotation. Each one records its own views and clicks, and a turn that happens while the strip is off screen is not counted.

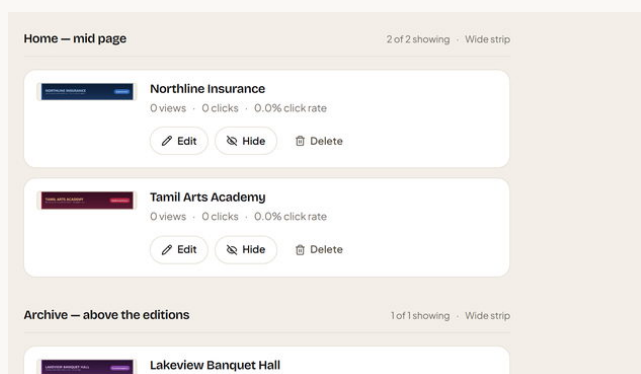

FIGURE 3.2 — In the dashboard: two advertisers booked into Home — mid page. There are no move arrows here, because a rotating slot has no running order.

3.5 Editing a booking

Edit opens the booking on its own screen, showing the artwork currently running at the top. Every field can be changed — including moving an advertisement from one placement to another, which is how you upgrade an advertiser from the footer to the side rail without re-typing anything.

IF YOU CHANGE THE PLACEMENT, CHECK THE SHAPE

The two shapes are not interchangeable. Moving a booking from a strip slot to a card slot — or the other way — leaves the old artwork in place at the wrong proportion, so it will show with wide bands of background beside it. When you change placement across the two shapes, upload replacement artwork at the new size in the same edit.

What is on the live site today

Thirty-one demonstration bookings are running on the live website now. This is the complete list of what was booked, where, and — just as deliberately — what was left empty.

4.1 The ten placements that were filled

Reader — above the pages	1	Harbour Travel	A strip inside an edition, where readers actually are.
Home — leaderboard, above everything	2	Crown Auto Sales · Kanchi Grocers	Two advertisers sharing the single frame at the very top of the site, at eight and six seconds each.
Home — tower, left of the headline	4	Meridian Realty · Thendral Sweets · Northgate Dental · Vanni Tailors	Four advertisers in two upright frames. Two are on screen at any moment and the other two cycle in behind them.
Home — cards, right of the headline	6	Riverside Optical · Summit Roofing · Anjali Daycare · TamilNet Wireless · Kavitha Photography · Northway Heating & Cooling	Six advertisers in four card frames, each holding its place for a different number of seconds — the clearest demonstration of the running order on the site.

4.2 The four placements left open — on purpose

These were left unsold so that the “This space could be your advertisement” panel can be seen in its real setting, on the real site, alongside genuinely booked slots.

PLACEMENT	WHERE TO LOOK FOR IT
Archive — between editions	The archive, inside the grid of covers.
Reader — under the pages	Inside an edition, below the last page.

CLEARING THE DEMONSTRATION BOOKINGS BEFORE YOU GO LIVE

Every one of these thirty-one is an invented business, and none of them should be on the site when the first real advertiser is. There are two ways to remove them:

By hand — Admin → Banners, press Delete on each and confirm. Thirty-one presses, about two minutes, and you get to see the site empty out as you go.

All at once — ask us to run `node scripts/seed-demo-banners.mjs --clear`, which removes exactly these thirty-one and nothing you have added yourself. Each demonstration booking is tagged, which is how it knows the difference.

PART 5

Reference

Every field, every limit, every message — and the short list to read down the phone to an advertiser who asks what to send you.

5.1 Every field on the Add a banner form

FIELD	REQUIRED	RULES, AND WHAT HAPPENS IF YOU LEAVE IT
Where it appears	Yes	One of the fourteen placements. Choose it first — it decides the artwork size asked for below, and whether Seconds on screen appears at all. Defaults to Side rail — every page .
Artwork	Yes	One JPG, PNG or WebP, under 2 MB. Resized to the slot's exact size on upload. A PDF, SVG or HEIC file is refused.
Advertiser name	Yes	Up to 160 characters. For your eyes only — it is how you find this booking again. Readers never see it.
Link when clicked	No	Must start with <code>http://</code> or <code>https://</code> . Anything else is discarded and stored as no link. Empty means the advertisement is not clickable, and its click count will stay at zero.
Only in one edition?	No	Show in all editions is the normal answer, and the default.
Position	No	A number. Lower numbers sit higher up. Leave it empty and the booking is added to the end. Counting in tens — 10, 20, 30 — leaves room to slot something in between later. In a slot whose advertisements share frames it decides the running order instead — who is on screen when the page opens, and who follows.
Seconds on screen	No	Only shown for slots whose advertisements share a frame. How long this one holds its frame before the next takes over. Blank means seven seconds; anything from 3 to 60 is accepted. Give a card carrying an address or a phone number longer than a card carrying a logo.
Start showing on	No	A date. Empty means it starts now.
Stop showing on	No	A date. Empty means it runs until you hide it.
Show it on the website straight away	—	Ticked by default. Untick it to save the booking without putting it on the site — useful when the artwork is approved but the invoice is not paid.

5.2 Artwork rules

RULE	DETAIL
Three sizes only	1200 × 600 px for a card — the two side rails, the four cards beside the home-page headline, and the footer. 1650 × 300 px for a wide strip — the billboard slots. 600 × 1200 px for a tower — the two upright frames down the left of the home page.
One file per advertisement	The same picture is used on phones, tablets and desktops. You do not need separate versions.
Under 2 MB	The form refuses anything larger. Aim well below it — the website compresses what you upload, but a smaller start is always a smaller finish.
JPG, PNG or WebP	JPG for photographs, PNG for flat colour and text, WebP if the design tool offers it.
Nothing is ever cropped	A wrongly-shaped image is fitted inside the frame with white at the sides rather than trimmed, so no phone number is ever cut off.
Strips are tiny on a phone	A 1650 × 300 strip is about 64 px tall on a phone. A logo and three or four words. Never put a phone number or an address on a strip — put it on a card.
Towers are narrow everywhere	A tower is about 150 px wide on a desktop and narrower again on a phone. Set it the way a shop window is set: the name large, one line under it, and the number. Nothing small, and no paragraph.

WHAT TO ASK AN ADVERTISER FOR — READ THIS DOWN THE PHONE

“Send me one image, 1200 pixels wide by 600 tall, as a JPG or PNG under 2 MB. Put your business name, one line about what you do, your phone number and your address on it — big enough to read on a phone. And send me the web address you want people taken to when they click it.”

If they have nothing, the fourteen demonstration advertisements now on the site were each made from a name, three services, a phone number and an address — that is genuinely all it takes.

Examples of the shapes, at the sizes the site asks for

Three of the demonstration cards — 1200 × 600 px. This is the shape the side rails, the footer and the four cards beside the home-page headline use.

A demonstration wide strip — 1650 × 300 px. Note how little it can carry.

5.3 Messages you may see

MESSAGE	WHAT IT MEANS, AND WHAT TO DO
“Banner images must be JPG, PNG or WebP.”	A PDF, SVG or HEIC file was chosen — HEIC is what an iPhone produces by default. Export it as JPG and try again.
“... is 3.4 MB. Banner artwork must be under 2 MB.”	Export it smaller, or save it as a JPG at about 80% quality.
“Choose the artwork for this advertisement.”	You pressed Add banner before attaching an image.
“Enter the advertiser's name...”	The advertiser name is blank. It is the one text field that is required.
The advertisement is saved but not on the site	Three possibilities, in the order worth checking: Show it on the website straight away was unticked (the row will be tagged HIDDEN); a start date in the future was set; or its stop date has already passed.
The advertisement looks stretched or has bands at the sides	The artwork is not the shape the slot renders at — usually a card image in a strip slot, or the reverse. Edit the booking and upload artwork at the size in 5.2.
You cannot see it on the site immediately	The public pages refresh about once a minute. Wait a moment and reload.

5.4 A weekly rhythm that works

WHEN	WHAT TO DO
When an advertiser says yes	Post the banner the same day. It does not have to wait for the edition — the website and the magazine are on separate clocks.
Every Sunday, with the edition	Open Banners and read down the groups. Anything tagged as stopped is a renewal conversation waiting to happen, and its final numbers are right there to quote.
When an advertiser asks if it is working	Read them the three numbers under their booking. Views, clicks, click rate. Nothing else needs saying.
When one pauses or does not pay	Hide , never Delete. Hide keeps the artwork, the position and every number, so restarting them later is one press.
When the rail gets long	That is the system working as intended — there is no limit. But consider charging more for the top three positions, because they genuinely are worth more.

IN ONE PARAGRAPH

Admin → Banners. Choose the slot, attach one image, type the advertiser's name and their web address, press Add banner. It is on the website in about a minute. To change the order, use the arrows. To pause an advertiser, use Hide, never Delete. The three numbers under each booking are what you quote when they ask whether it is working. The side rail has no limit — sell it as hard as you can.
